Modern Riding.

The days of our grandmothers have passed, and with them their ways. How shocked they would be to see their children's children riding astride today.

As time goes on, we, too, will see stranger things. It is nothing more than natural that ideas should advance along this line as they do along other lines. Sixty years ago, if a lady had been seen riding astride through the streets, people would have thought her mannish, most ungraceful, and lost to all common sense and modesty. To-day, according to science this is the only proper way to ride, and some even think it more graceful.

Picture your grandmother exchanging her long riding skirt for a divided one. We can never associate the two or even think that, she, with all her modesty, sweetness and dignity, could dream of doing such a thing. She would praise these verses, which I have seen somewhere:

"Come back! Come back!" men cry and scoff;

"Ye skirt-dividing witches.

Come right straight home and take 'em off;

My breeches! oh, my breeches!" I have lived long enough. My time of life

Must pass the big divide; To see my daughter and my wife Trying to ride astride!"

In this time of gaited horses and riding schools, what is a more perfect picture than to see a perfect horsewoman upon a splendid horse. It is a sight any person would turn to see, especially a Kentuckian, who so dearly loves a horse and horsemanship.

Many of us still cling to the old-fashioned way of riding, and we can but wait to see what improvement over the present way the next generation will bring forth.

Fortnightly Club.

The Fortnightly Club met with Mrs. Maurice Miller, Monday afternoon. Mrs. Buford Tracy read a most interesting paper on "English Artists up to the Seventeenth Century" and Mrs. Gippie Simpson also read a most interesting paper on "Early English Authors." The meeting was heartily enjoyed by all present.

Rabbit-Hunt.

The annual rabbit hunt Tuesday was a grand success. Most of the party were on horse back. They left town about ten o'clock, and went out the Colby pike to Colby station, then crossed into the lane coming out on the Lexington pike. An elegant lunch was served, and seven rabbits were caught.

Only one accident occurred. Mr. Lewis Hampton fell from his horse, but the rabbit had to suffer, and not he.
